Jim grew up in Endicott, New York, near the En-Joie Golf Course, famous for the PGA Tour's BC Open. Introduced to golf by his father, Jim excelled as a junior golfer and turned professional in 1992, joining the PGA in 1998. He served as Head Professional at Heritage Country Club from 1996 to 2003 and twice played in the BC Open.

In 2004, Jim became a teaching professional and tournament director at Forsgate Country Club in New Jersey, later becoming Director of Golf. In 2010, he founded Woods Golf School, guiding thousands of students. In 2013, he was Head Golf Professional at Putnam County Golf Course in Mahopac, New York.

Currently, Jim is the Director of Golf at Omni Bedford Springs Old Course in Pennsylvania, managing and teaching year-round. The course is highly rated nationally. Throughout his career, Jim has become an expert in various aspects of golf, with a passion for teaching and playing the game.
